

Option 1 : Individual Tweet Visibility

Scenario

Freddie tweets too much. However, he does not want just anyone to see his tweets because some are just really incomprehensible for other people. Two words: inside jokes. He uses the individual tweet visibility feature to tailor the visibility of his individual tweets (cannot really be more descriptive than that). Now, his silly adventure updates with Newbie (who recently joined Tweetee) and other friends IRL in Tweetee cannot be seen by the entire Tweetee community. Though his other posts such as updates about awesome games he is currently playing created by his idol, Rex (the recluse game creator).

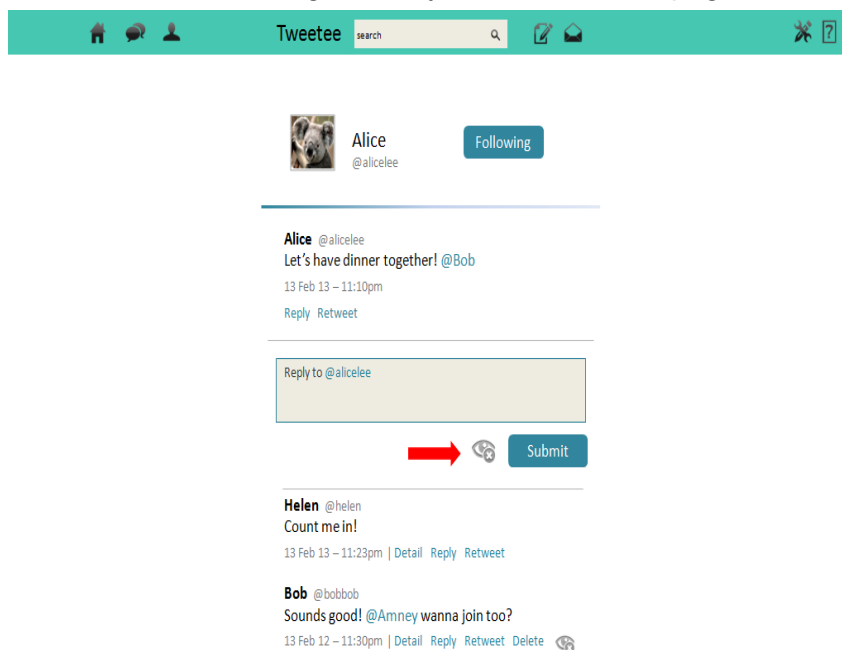

Screen Specification

When users post a new tweet, they can now choose from three different visibility options:

1. Public
2. Followers only
3. Just me

The icon is currently highlighted by a red arrow in this screen below (user logged in is Bob). Also, users can change this permission visibility anytime granted that the tweet is theirs. The icon is active and will be changed once clicked.

The user can change the tweet visibility anywhere in Tweetee and when user clicks on the button, it does not navigate away from the current page he is on.

Option 2 : Changing themes

Scenario

Arty likes colors. He is not satisfied with the simple default theme for Tweetee so he changes his at least every two months. He likes how he can choose several themes for Tweetee: Summer, Fall, etc. His friends on the other hand, not so much.

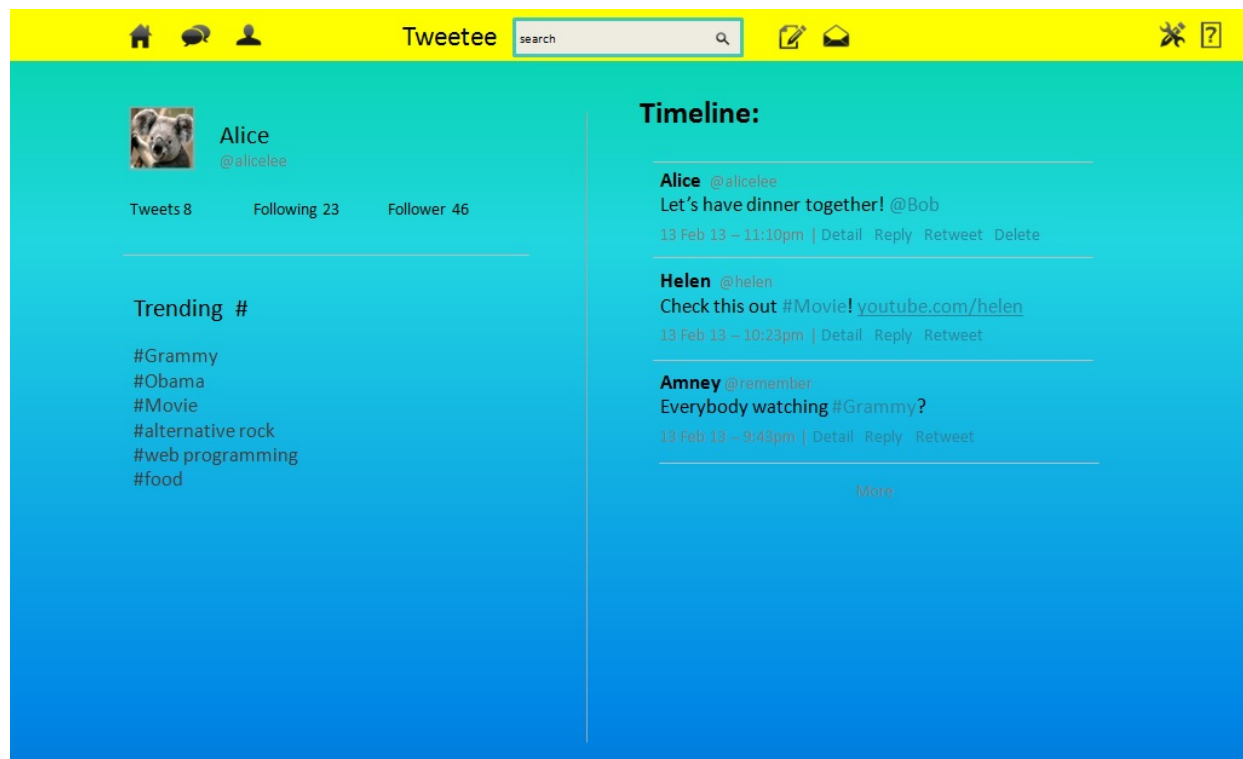

Screen Specification

Available themes can be accessed from the Edit Settings page.

Displayed below are sample themes.

Note that these themes are subject to change.
